

I REALLY NEED A SONG

Give me shelter for a while, I just need a break
Keep me warm with a smile before I overtake
Because my life is something hard to guess
And I really need a rest

Take my hand by the time, I can hardly stand
Tell some stories again, hope you'll see there end
Because I feel I'm much too young
There's somewhere I must be wrong

I'll bring you places nobody goes
Whispering my secrets, some nobody knows
And I'll never lie I swear
Just believe I just can care
Believe I just can care

Please don't run away
If you see me down a lonely avenue
I'll find something to say
It would be the last place I've been waiting for you
And maybe the first day I'll be loving you

But you seem so down and I feel too high
I'm trying to shine but you close your eyes
And whenever the sky is blue
You're still asking if it's true

While you let me flight without even believe
I'm asking myself what else can I give
There are words that must be good
You don't want to hear what you should

It's the end of the while, it's the end of the break
I really have to go, I have to overtake
And I feel I'm much too young
And I really need a song
I really need a song
